

LONDON FASHION WEEK: TEMPERLEY LONDON FALL WINTER 2012

Written By: Lynn Furge
Photos: Courtesy of Catwalking.com

This Eastern European aristocratic lady full of folkloric legends and prints to match has skipped over the pond and landed at Temperley London's Fall Winter 2012 show entitled "Renaissance". After such a sleek and silky patternless Spring, we were back on to detailed embroideries on top of tulle overlays, jeweled embellishments and quilted embroidered stiff skirts and lush jacquards.

Rich golds peppered between the vibrant embroidered florals and jewel tones to match the jewels worthy of some Warsaw royal crown (done by Mawi) came to play come for the eveningwear run. The strongest bits were the bronze boot-leg brocade suit, the navy and black evening gown with emerald jeweled cross back detail and the only full knitwear look, a little mohair cape and matching skirt. All stood specifically strongly on their own amongst the folksy prints and huge Prussian hats.

